Located in northern Los Angeles County, the investment is approximately 70 miles from downtown Los Angeles and only 50 miles from the east S. F. Valley. The location is known best for its deep rooted aerospace and defense industry, anchored by Edwards Air Force Base and several other booming industries, such as renewable energy and logistics. The city provides a blend of suburban life with a more affordable cost of living compared to other parts of California while still being within driving distance of the greater Los Angeles area. Today, the Lancaster/Palmdale area has seen significant growth boosted by the development of the aerospace industry with many residents working at nearby Edwards Air Force Base as well as other aerospace and defense contractors like Boeing, Lockheed and Northrop Grumman.

The broader Lancaster/Palmdale metropolitan area estimated population in 2025 was about 554,000 with an annual growth rate of approximately 1.5%. The median home price is around $460,000, creating an affordable extension of the Los Angeles economy, and has experienced sustained population and housing growth as families seek value outside the urban core.

The area is served by public transportation via the Antelope Valley Transit Authority. For rail travel, the Lancaster Palmdale Metrolink station provides weekday and weekend commuter rail service to Los Angeles Union Station on the Antelope Valley line with several stops through the San Fernando Valley, Burbank and Glendale. Hollywood Burbank Airport or Los Angeles International Airport are easily accessed by freeways and Metrolink, or Flyaway bus service.
